ACADEMIC MASTER IN ART CURATING AND MANAGEMENT SCHOLARSHIP REGULATION – JAN 2023

For the January 23 intake, RUFA is granting 2 scholarships to Italian and international students who are enrolling in the Academic Master in ART CURATING AND MANAGEMENT* in partnership with MACRO Museum.

ABOUT MACRO Museum

MACRO - Rome's Museum of Contemporary Art - is a museum complex that encompasses two sites. One is inside Testaccio's Ex-Mattatoio, and the other one is in a former brewery factory, which, until 1971, one of the few examples of industrial archaeology in the capital. The first phase of the reconstruction and conversion of the site finished in 1999. It involved the recovery of the main building, which is composed of two parallel factory units. The work was finished as part of Odile Decq's Sensual Territories project, following an international competition held by the Municipality of Rome in 2000. The MACRO's permanent collection showcases examples of some of the most important art movements in Italy since the 1960s, including Arte Povera and Forma 1.

1. Brief

Looking at the present in order to understand traditions.

Subverting a natural assumption. Where we come from is hidden in our habits. From the way we stand in the world to our perception of the images that surround us, the everyday life that normally flows before us always hides our history. Knowing how to look is an act of the mind that is learned with practice and with the right tools, tools that will be provided within the Master's program. However, it is important for us to understand your attitude towards visual and conceptual thinking. Looking means being able to look at a painting or an artwork, or a particular exhibition, but also, in a mind-broadening way, like an invisible zoom, looking at an era, a space, a time, a nation.

We firmly believe that respect for diversity comes from knowledge of peculiarity; every place and every era have their own way of posing, of working on traditions, intended not only as a cure for the past, but also as a form of attention to what is daily life.

The curators we imagine are also critics, sniffing, listening, reasoning.

From the place where they live and from their generation, they try to identify trends, visual and conceptual, or even weaknesses or critical points to think about, to then learn how to stage them.

The Macro Museum of Rome has shared the following challenge with RUFA, for which participants are invited to submit creative proposals and solutions.

From art manuals we study the trends and eras of the past, but we try to imagine, with the tools we have and with the knowledge of our present, the new themes and challenges that can be used today as a starting point and analysis for a history of the present. Not excluded in this area of research is visual investigation, for example the work of painting around a subject, or the use of new technologies, or at the opposite end, think of the reevaluation of nature and art in landscapes. A crucial element, for example, could be the rediscovery of female artists to whom too little attention has been paid over the centuries, up to the peculiarity of certain ethnic or seemingly primitive art. Anything you think can be an interesting element of analysis to be able to understand the present, and through this present, the character of a particular place.

- Conduct research on the culture of a country (not necessary a Nation) of your choice (assuming preferably the country of origin, Italy is also allowed) and choose a thematic area of interest for this historical moment. Within this research look for interesting elements of analysis to further understand the customs and habits of the country in question.
- Develop an idea that artists could engage with. For example, you might consider a particular theme or topic, but also express a media preference: painting, sculpture, performance series, festival, video art, etc. Make the presentation of the project clear through images and/or a short video presentation (not to exceed 3 minutes) to include in your presentation (e.g. as a link to a streaming platform).
- Also introduce yourself with text and images. You can include projects you have done and exhibitions you have held.
