ACADEMIC MASTER IN ART CURATING AND MANAGEMENT
SCHOLARSHIP REGULATION – JAN 2024

For the January 24 intake, RUFA is granting 1 scholarship to Italian and international students who are enrolling in the Academic Master in ART CURATING AND MANAGEMENT.

1. Brief

Looking at the present in order to understand traditions.

Subverting a natural assumption. Where we come from is hidden in our habits; the path we choose to undertake and the way we perceive what surrounds us hide our history.

Art curators cultivate the ability to look at the world around them. 'Looking at' is an act of the mind that can be learned with the right tools and continuous practice. It means being able to deeply look at an artwork or a particular exhibition, but also, in a mind-broadening way, to look at a particular space, a time, and a country.

We firmly believe that respect for diversity comes from knowledge of peculiarity; every place and every period of time have their own way of posing, of working on traditions, intended not only as a focus on the past, but also as a form of attention to what is daily life.

Then, art curators are also art critics who breathe, listen, and reason about culture and life.

People who thrive to identify trends - visual and conceptual - or even weaknesses and critical points thanks to exploration of the place where they live and the interaction with their peers, to eventually create an appropriate stage for them.

Combining art manuals and the knowledge of their present, new themes and challenges can be discovered by upcoming art curators as a starting point to analyze both the history and the present.

Participants in this call are asked to define their own area of research to develop an original curatorial idea for an exhibition, which can focus on a specific theme or subject, an art cluster, a minority group, a specific place, a renovated appreciation for nature and landscapes, and/or emerging technology. A lens to understand the present, and through this present, the character of particular traditions.

In developing an original project, participants should observe the following requirements:

- Present yourself by creating a 'self-portrait' to illustrate who you are and the world you live in (your city, your network, your belongings, etc.). Show us your passions, fears, and desires, as well as your loves and your hates. You may work via any technique you wish: words, images, or a combination of the two.

- Conduct research on the culture of a country of your choice (preferably your country of origin) and choose a theme of interest for this moment in history. Look for interesting elements of analysis to further explore your theme.
- Develop a curatorial idea that artists could engage with. For example, you might consider a particular theme or topic, but also express a media preference: painting, sculpture, performance series, festival, video art, etc. Express your ideas through words, images, or a short video presentation.
